So He Thought Mr Michael J. Stattelman

This is nothing more than a Journal of thoughts to force upon you those (thoughts) of your own, to inspire and instill in any reader that the only limitations one has, are those that are placed on them by self and no other. Hopefully some of the thoughts and or ideas I have had in my short life with regards to personal experiences and studies will have a positive effect and encourage the growth of the individual mentally as well as spiritually. They are not arranged in any specific order only grouped, as not to allow any consistency in thought. Each has been listed followed by an explanation designed to provoke thoughts of the reader, whether he/she agrees or not. I was not aiming for agreement only the expansion of current thought patterns and series. Maybe a lot of you have had the same or similar ideas, maybe not. Try not to look at it in that fashion, only to pull out the value that may advance you personally with regards to the detail in which you look at the decisions you make. Take the value of the thoughts you have with relation to their potential use to others and possibly the world as a whole and apply them. It is with the intention of changing the life of all who read the material, enacting the rule that with a single great idea one will never be the same. After reading the work you will not let yourself be or at least think the same. For you have grown far beyond where you were prior to reading this text.
