Exciting time travel fiction "Hidden well out of sight, the battle-hardened soldiers waited, fear freezing them tightly to where they stood. A dozen druids stood in a circle around the magnificent tree raising their hands to the full moon." Arthur had thought the seventeenth century uncivilised, but this was something else! The year AD 41 was barbaric beyond belief, the people raw, survival difficult and emotions fierce and free. And yet, there was something about the people, their passions, their wild sense of life... Once again, Arthur stumbles out of the time portal into an unknown era – this time into the midst of a violent fight where he almost loses his life. Rescued by the druid Omrad, separated from his sister, Emily, who is enslaved by Romans, he becomes deeply and irrevocably involved in the historic events of he day. From the moment he meets the beautiful young warrior princess, Boudicca, history is altered – only time will tell how much. Can he find Emily and repair the damage he has done? And what does the wily Druid know that he's not saying? He speaks of Arthur's destiny, of helping him, but there is something hidden. What is it Omrad really sees in the stars?
