“Remembrance: the Pink Chair Project” is a love story in paint and celebrates the memory of the artist's mother in moving and beautiful images. Lynne sensed her mother’s presence while painting an Adirondack chair of her mother’s favorite color – bright, knock-your-socks-off pink. After the initial surprise of that experience, Lynne began painting the chair in various locations that had special meaning to the artist or her mother. These locations varied through several states and Canada, and the resulting exhibit traveled for 3 years. Each painting has a story and these are told in this book. Lynne says: “Qualities of my mom that were in the background are coming to the foreground as I appreciate them more. I start to see how they have altered and enriched my life and how I have been given the gift of looking, sometimes, in the same direction. The paintings tell me all I need to know.”
