This play was written and offered here to you (with the permission of Robert Munsch, the author of the original, real and totally awesome "Paperbag Princess") as a fun activity for kindergarten through fourth graders that will give kids a chance to expand reading into an interdisciplinary activity (drama/public speaking, art as in making the set and costumes, etc.). There are 25 speaking parts.

We are putting this reading curriculum addendum on Kindle so that as many people as possible can see and use it. Kindle doesn't allow us to just put this on for free because, of course, Kindle needs to make money (although we can make it free on a rotating basis, which we do, and we put it free on the Kindle lending and match program) so we are pricing this at the lowest allowable price and the traditional authors' royalties will be given to the non-profit CASA (Court Appointed Special Advocates), which represents abused and neglected children. In our state (Oregon) at least, all CASAs are volunteers and every little financial contribution helps. Please feel free to copy and share this as you will. Thank you.
