Great Argentina: Comparative Studies Between Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Uruguay, Bolivia and Paraguay (Classic Reprint) Francisco Seeber

General Considerations The present time, when the idea is being formed of a political union, which might be converted into an alliance, between Brazil, Chile and Argentina has appeared to me opportune for making a comparative study of the degree of civilization and of the riches, power and economic laws of these countries, without excluding other neighbours, such as Uruguay, Peru, Bolivia and Paraguay, which, at least for us Argentines, cannot be less congenial, and to which we are united by sufferings and glories experienced in common. The economic interests of different countries, reciprocally respected, are the only interests which consolidate the sentiments of fraternity, because only thus do they rest upon real and immovable bases and are not limited to words and manifestations which often are acts of mere courtesy and are soon forgotten with absence.
