The 2003 OCLC Environmental Scan: Pattern Recognition (Identifies and Describes Issues and Trends That Impact OCLC, Libraries, Museums, Archives and Other Allied Organizations) Cathy De Rosa, Lorcan Dempsey, Alane Wilson

The purpose of the 2003 OCLC Environmental Scan: Pattern Recognition is the identification and description of issues and trends that are impacting and will impact OCLC, libraries, museums, archives and other allied organizations, positively and negatively. The scope of the environmental scan is the social, political, economic and technological spheres in which OCLC, libraries, museums, archives and allied organizations operate. The geographic scope of the report is, as much as possible, international. It is a high level view of the landscape, sufficient to inform, stimulate discussion and serve as an outline of where more in-depth research of trends and issues is deemed desirable and necessary. Charts, graphs and illustrations have been used throughout as a way to present information that might otherwise take many words to communicate. And, finally, readers will see patterns emerge among the trends, viewed through the lens of each of the landscapers.
