Excerpt from Fish-Tails, and Some True Ones

"I live in the world rather as a Spectator of Mankind than as one of the species...." - Addison.

"The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted," - Othello.

The object of the makers of books is generally twofold, for they desire the fruits of their genius and their labours in non-material as well as material form: fame and fortune (money and notoriety), pelf and a peerage, pennies and popularis aura - what else do romancists desire? Anonymous newspapermen have to be satisfied with less; but who can appraise their consciousness of power?
