In 1960, civil discord in Vietnam fills the news. After his college graduation, Patrick Fitzgerald plans to join his daddy's South Carolina accounting firm. But Uncle Sam may have another position in mind for Patrick—in the U.S. Army. His family's affluence would be no match for the persuasion of the military draft. Adriana Montagna's Papá ekes out a living as a coal miner in the mountains of West Virginia. Can a lasting relationship form with Patrick, or will his wealth become a barrier between them? Meanwhile, the fiber of America's unity stands on the precipice, while its youth fight a no-win battle on foreign soil. What good can a young couple hope for at such a time as this?
